Many people contributed to the process and preparation of the Comprehensive Conservation Plan for the Upper Mississippi River National Wildlife and Fish Refuge. First and foremost are the numerous refuge employees who assisted at 46 public meetings and workshops and countless other meetings with conservation partners and organizations, and who helped gather and write information on often tight deadlines. This planning work was done in addition to their regular duties of managing and administering the refuge.

A special thanks to Refuge Biologist Eric Nelson for coordinating much of the planning for four years, for his writing and editing, and for being there every step of the way. Thanks also to the District Managers and assistant managers, some now retired, who led the charge for their areas of the Refuge and contributed in all phases of public involvement and plan preparation. Thanks to Biologist Brian Stemper for his wizardry in preparation of maps, and to Public Use Specialist Cindy Samples for many Powerpoint productions, video record keeping, and for providing and taking photos for the various documents. Thanks to Administrative Assistant Lee Donahue for processing thousands of written comments, handling phone calls, and performing many, many tasks along the way.

Other staff contributors included Sharonne Baylor, Tex Hawkins, Lisa Reid, Vickie Hirschboeck, and Vicky Drieslein.

The Regional planning staff provided outstanding support and advice. Of special note are the extraordinary efforts of Writer/Editor Jane Hodgins who transformed our words to numerous draft and final documents, newsletters, and the website; Planner John Schomaker who provided overall process, logistical, and technical support; and Editorial Assistant Jane Lardy-Nelson who handled multiple distributions, mailings, comments, and Federal Register notices. The contributions of John Dobrovolny (cultural resources sections), Jeff Gosse (NEPA review), and James Caudill of the Division of Economics in Washington, D.C., (economic report and analysis), are appreciated.

Thanks also to numerous upper level managers and leaders from the Regional and Washington offices of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, as well as the Assistant Secretary of the Interior's office, for their time, review, and support in dealing with challenging issues.

The wonderful professionals of the Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Illinois departments of natural resources, along with the Corps of Engineers and other U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service offices, served on the Interagency Planning Team and offered critical review and suggestions throughout the process. They also handled countless inquiries and attended many of their own internal meetings on the plan. Their time, patience, and expertise is most appreciated.

Finally, a special thank you to the thousands of citizens who attended meetings and workshops, offered criticism and suggestions, and stayed engaged throughout the process in the true spirit of democracy. Their interest and commitment to the resource, even though viewpoints and opinions varied, made for a better plan. Their passion for the Mississippi River, and the refuge, bodes well for this unique national treasure.
